CAISSE D'ÉPARGNE

Instilling genuine project culture into the company

Hugues d'Heudières, Head of the Quality Methods Monitoring at the Caisse Nationale des Caisses d'Épargne (CNCE).

Our Group is launching more and more large projects to meet its ambitions for development and the evolution of its markets. We need a perfect command of these projects. Their complexity has led us to review our working methods and develop the related best practice.

"IPMC has helped us to support this change effectively and professionally. Through a practical approach, IPMC consultants spread the best practice in project management and, above all instilled a real project culture into the company. Moreover, a grasp of our problem and a solid experience base enabled IPMC to identify something that was fundamental to ensure that these changes would succeed and last: "professionalising" the present and future managers of these projects.

The ability to correctly dissect the winning components of a real project monitoring was the asset that made IPMC stand out. Besides, its consultants rely on a know-how and teaching that is very active, fun and relevant, vital if the fundamentals of project management are to be taken on board. One feels the genuine ability to step back from the topic and so enable the basis of a real change in culture to be built. Although we were aware of these concepts of project management, IPMC stages them in a novel and effective way."
